

A Modern Touch

Award-winning property developer, Dandara, has selected products from Scolmore Group's Definity Wiring Accessories range for one of its new Heritage Homes developments on the Isle of Man.

The new Springfield Rise development is described as a delightful semi-rural development of two, three and four bedroom mews, semi-detached and detached homes and it is situated on the outskirts of the village of Foxdale, just 15 minutes from the Island's capital.

Scolmore's Definity Screwless Flat Plate wiring accessories in chrome and brushed steel finishes have been installed throughout the downstairs accommodation of the two new show homes on the site by electrical contractors, Brew and Corkill. The products are also being installed as standard fittings throughout the new houses as they are being completed.

The screwless, flat-plate Definity wiring accessories met the specification requirements for a high quality, contemporary-styled range that provides flexibility.

Contractor, Brian Brew, commented: "The clean, modern aesthetics of Scolmore's Definity range played a key role in our choice, but we were also impressed with the flexibility that was offered due to the modular element of the range which allows you to effectively customise the plate according to your needs with a range of interchangeable, multi-functional modules."

Dandara has been building high quality residential and commercial properties since 1988 and over the years, the company has received over 50 industry accolades for architecture, design and quality.
